80% Furnace Phase-Out

With May 2013 comes another change in the heating and air conditioning world. 80% furnaces (A furnace that wastes 20% of the energy put into it) will no longer be available in Indiana. The government has raised their standards again, and will only allow 90% furnaces. This is good news for most. With a higher demand for 90% furnaces comes a better price (or at least a price that won't raise as rapidly). However, for those of you who currently have an 80% furnace, there won't be a choice for you once it needs replaced. Along with upgrading to a 90% furnace, you will also need a flu pipe run through the roof of your house. In most cases, this is a fairly simple upgrade. There are, however, instances that it is very difficult if not impossible. Take this simply as a warning, and be prepared if/when the time comes to replace your furnace.

SNOW

We know most of you aren't fans of that word, but winter in Indiana is bound to bring the snow!

Don't forget we clear snow and spread salt, so call or email us today to get on our first come, first served list!

Kaden & Keelan Update

Captain America and the baby spider had a great Halloween (as seen in picture).

Kaden had a blast singing in his Christmas program. He even managed to face the audience for part of it! Keelan is 9 months now and has become very mobile. He's squirming, crawling, just moving as much as he can! Both boys had a great Christmas, filled with lots of family time and celebrating the birth of Jesus!
