The Allergy Season Buzz

In 2015, many allergy sufferers will try and meet the longer ragweed season with a new arsenal of products to relieve their sneezing, itching and coughing. And one of these wonder products won't come from the pharmacy but the farmers market, as people turn to locally produced honey for a cure. However, according to an article on Web MD, the theory that a spoonful of honey this summer will keep allergies at bay in the fall is mostly a myth. The notion of vaccinating against allergies by ingesting small amounts of pollen deposited in honey by bees has some scientific backing- but studies have shown little or no correlation to reduced allergy symptoms. The top 3 natural ways to fight back against allergies are essential oils in the shower, stinging nettle, and keep a cleaner home. To help with the cleaner home, we can install a whole house air purifier on your existing HVAC system. It's a simple fix to a complicated problem.

Kaden, Keelan, Kelton Update

Kaden just finished up 1st grade as well as his spring soccer. He loved and succeeded in them both! Keelan is spending his time hanging out and playing, as toddlers should. Kelton will be a year old July 9th! He's been crawling and pulling up, and will be walking in no time. The summer looks to be full of lots of fun for the kiddos!
