What is a Heat Pump?

A heat pump can work in both heating and cooling mode. The heating works most efficiently until it gets below about 25 degrees (this varies some). Then your backup heat will turn on: either your electric air handler or gas furnace. The heat pump will do all of your cooling as well.

It's Allergy Time Again!

If you are an asthma or allergy sufferer, like 1 out of 5 Americans, you dread the problems that come with warmer weather. Everyone loves to see the sunshine and feel some warmth in the air, but not if you can't breathe. Indianapolis ranks #52 for the worst cities to live in with asthma or allergies.

What if you could decrease, or even eliminate, those breathing problems? We have several in-home air cleaners that can help! And they are affordable for every income level. Even if you upgrade your filter one level, you will see a huge improvement in your breathing within your home. Our different air cleaners directly tie to your HVAC ductwork with minimal maintenance. It is a simple fix to a complicated problem.
